COME AGAIN.

THE ELKS did themselves proud and in doing so they did credit to Tonopah and added luster to the reputation of the camp for doing the right thing in the right way. Never has there been a more generous display of hospitality and the committee of arrangements is entitled to the thanks of every person who has the welfare of the camp at heart. The program afforded sufficient variety to provide for the taste of every one of the visitors and all that was lacking was the real brand of Tonopah weather, which would have completed the happiness of the guests. However, the heavy rain that fell Sunday night furnished an excuse for the visitors to linger in the fine home of Tonopah lodge and share to the fullest extent the hospitality so lavishly bestowed. This is the right spirit to have in a camp and it is one that arouses the admiration of other communities. It is hard to understand why the outside world cannot manifest the same liberal spirit which comes naturally to the people of Tonopah, but it is a fact that elsewhere there is not the same cordiality or spontaneity in extending greetings and throwing open the doors that all may enjoy themselves to the fullest bent of their inclinations.

The Reno Gazette says that town has not the knack of entertaining or convincing visitors that the latherstring is out to be pulled at all hours of the day or night and pauses to ask why. The recent, state convention of the Fraternal Order of Eagles is taken as an illustration of the enthusiasm which established cities in the desert and makes the citizens of those cities an important factor in social and public affairs. As an incident it is mentioned that the Eagles from Tonopah and Goldfield almost monopolized the offices of the Eagles, and this is cited as an instance of how the men of the southern country stick together and pull together on all occasions where their interests are involved. The fact is that the system is born in the blood and the men of the mining camps are temperamentally constructed to the end that they yield to generous impulses and are always found ready to assist others without any expectation of securing any return on the investment. The Reno spirit is of the kind that is willing to cast bread on the waters if there is any assurance that it will return in the shape of poundcake, but the spirit of giving is lacking.

SUFFRAGE AND SLAUGHTER.

UNDER this euphonious caption the Woman's Journal of Boston, a suffragette organ, essays a defence of the suffragists of Colorado with the statement that they were first to bring the barbarities of the coal strike to public notice and that through their instrumentality President Wilson became interested. This is begging the question. The trouble dates back to the several sessions of the legislature where there were women representatives and senators and the records failed to show any strenuous protest against the system that has been in vogue ever since suffrage became a political factor in Colorado. It may be that the ladies unconsciously were hypnotized into the belief that the leaders of their respective parties were right in prescribing legislation and they were led blindfolded to the slaughter, but this is a poor excuse for lawmakers endowed with brains and gifted with a sense of their own superiority, which is the worst form of class consciousness, but they failed to do what was right or to attempt to check an outrageous system before it gained the mastery and submerged the commonwealth in civil war. It is a notorious fact that school lands have been pirated by corporations and it is also worthy of notice that the schools of Colorado have been the special custody of women ever since suffrage gained sway in that state. At the inception of suffrage education was conceded to the women as a sop to keep them away from more lucrative offices. This was a fitting recognition of woman's ability to look after the interests of the schools, but the experiment seems to have been a gross blunder. Every county superintendent of schools in Colorado is a woman and the state superintendent of public instruction is a woman. Thus the school interests were entrusted to them exclusively. Any failure or success that was due to their administration should be placed where it properly belonged. There was no interference by men. The women had a clear field wherein to exercise their authority and also to cooperate with other state and county officials in an advisory capacity. Yet they failed ignominiously in the special province for which the voters thought their talents would specially qualify them, and any outcry against the corporations for appropriating coal lands belonging to the schools comes with bad grace at this late hour. This is only an illustration of the truth of the allegation that women lack initiative and in politics are easily led by astute and cunning minds that mould the weaker vessel to their own devious ends.

The steel for the Panama canal locks was not such a steal after all. It is hard to put one over honest men, and the truth comes out that the grounds for the indictment were furnished by the army engineers who detected the fraud and reported the matter to the department of justice. Men like Goethals and his staff are not born like a lot of kittens with their eyes closed, and the simple fact that the ends of the huge girders alone were tempered according to specifications did not catch them napping. They tested the steel in the middle, center and at both ends before passing on the offerings. Poor material cannot be imposed on any builder unless he stands in with the graft.

New York juries are adopting as their motto: "Let no guilty man escape." Ex-Police Lieutenant Becker has been convicted a second time of having instigated the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

As a dominant factor at the Niagara conference Carranza bulks larger and larger. Mediators and delegates are beginning to realize that to proceed without him is to reckon without the host.

In the matter of resigning Huerta should not be criticised for not placing himself in the hands of his friends: he has none.

Judge Ben Lindsey will find that settling the Colorado strike is no child's play even for a juvenile court judge.

Having spoken from the steps of the capitol, "General" Coxe should next be granted "leave to print."

Whenever a militant suffragette gets into the National gallery she has a slashing good time.

Mr. Mellen's story now is a tale that is told. It was well told and well worth the telling.

We shall believe that Vice Consul Silliman is safe when he himself vices the statement.

Waiters and Pullman porters do not undertake to do the "service of mankind."

New Haven has the same disagreeable odor that attached to Credit Mobilier.

If General Funston's lines are lengthened his stakes should be strengthened.

Many of Villa's soldiers are barefooted, but they do not get "cold feet."

The first thing the mediators should do is to throw on the safety clutch.

Thus far the lessons of the war with Mexico are chiefly financial.

Will the Pan-American peace conference pan out?

Look not upon the grape juice when it is red.
